The Problem

Prohibiting personal mobile phones in the workspace addresses security but decreases worker productivity. In secure spaces, the “digital smoke break” wastes time and money when employees step outside to maintain contact with their daily lives. A “no mobile phone” space—whether in the military, in government or the private sector—is not consistent with the modern working world.

Military & Government

Offices and facilities that handle sensitive or classified information need BluVault to maintain communication with the outside world. The BluVault cabinet can route calls to any destination within the secure space or throughout a large building while maintaining operational security.

Who needs BluVault?

Corporate & Finance

With BluVault, employees working in finance or R&D can maintain mobile contact while the camera and data storage capabilities of their phones are safely locked outside. BluVault also saves money by reducing call volume on company-owned landlines.

The BluVault Solution

An employee leaves his or her phone in a BluVault cabinet outside the classified space. Phone calls are securely routed into the restricted office space and to the employee's desk phone. Facilities using BluVault see improved workforce productivity when employees can use their own private phones to conduct personal business.

Your personal life

No one wants to be cut off from the rest of their lives. BluVault enables you, the employee, to maintain a modern work-life balance from inside a restricted environment. You can also place calls from your mobile phone number instead of an anonymous desk phone, so your personal and business contacts will know it's you calling. And you have instant access to calls from the kid's school, family, the plumber or any other important person in your life.
